Tips to Optimize Communications with Your Patients

Here are a few tips to optimize communications when working with telephone interpreters:

- If possible, speak to the interpreter privately prior to the contact, providing relevant information regarding the member and the important information to convey.
- Interpreters are not allowed to rephrase or clarify. Encourage the interpreter to request clarification or to redirect explanations as needed.
- Direct the conversation to the member, not the interpreter.
- Use short sentences limited to a single concept, if possible.
- Allow adequate time for the interpreter to convey the information in the member's language.
- Avoid excessive medical terminology or technical explanations unless the member requests them.
- Avoid interrupting the interpreter.
- If the member's non-verbal cues indicate confusion, ask the member to summarize or restate what you have communicated.

Working Effectively with Members with LEP

Offer interpretation services to members who appear to be LEP, even if a member brings a family member or friend to their healthcare visit to act as an interpreter. The use of a qualified interpreter is preferred because relatives and friends are not usually proficient in healthcare terminology. Children should only be used as interpreters if there is imminent danger.

More Communication Tips

Here are a few more communication tips for your use when working with patients:

- Speak slowly, not loudly, with your patient.
- Organize information into short, simple sentences. Place important topics at the beginning and end of the conversation.
- Use open-ended questions to assess for understanding.
- If the member initially refused interpreter services and is not demonstrating full understanding, offer interpreter services again.
- Monitor non-verbal cues, such as facial expressions, positioning and body language. These may indicate understanding or confusion.

Best Practices for Providers

Hospitals, physicians and other healthcare professionals should:

- Complete a language skills self-assessment, which is kept on file. The assessment of their choice should be a prescreening/self-assessment tool to be done before seeking a staff member to use their multilingual skills with patients. Language skills assessments do not qualify as appropriate documentation for staff to be considered a qualified interpreter that adheres to generally accepted interpreter ethics and principles.
- Document the member's preferred spoken and written language in their office chart or medical record.
- Document the communication aid used for the visit (for example, the person who provided interpretation services); any use or refusal of a professional interpreter; or the use of family, friend, office staff or the provider as the interpreter.
- Post "Free Interpretation Services" sign (when available) at key points of contact.

Notice: Please Avoid Using Minors, Family Members or Friends as Interpreters

Federal law prohibits providers and staff from recommending or requiring the use of family or friends to interpret, or requesting them to provide their own interpreter. Interpretation services must be available at the time of the appointment. Minors should never be used as interpreters except in the case of an emergency involving imminent danger or threat to the safety and welfare of an individual or the public where there is no qualified interpreter available.

If you use a minor, document the reason a minor was used. Similarly, an adult may be used to interpret or aid in communication in an emergency involving imminent danger and there is no qualified interpreter available or; when the limited English proficient (LEP) individual specifically requests that an accompanying adult interpret, the adult agrees and reliance on that adult is appropriate. Bilingual providers and staff are considered qualified to provide language services if they have a demonstrated proficiency in speaking and understanding both English and at least one other language, including any necessary specialized vocabulary, terminology and phraseology and are able to effectively, accurately and impartially communicate directly with individuals with limited English proficiency in their primary language. Iowa Total Care verifies language capability of health plan staff through bilingual assessments in target languages and through the hiring, training and evaluation process for staff in English. Members should always be advised that the risks of using an untrained interpreter could result in miscommunication of medical information and compromise quality of care. It may also cause embarrassment when discussing sensitive topics. If a member declines interpretation services, it is best practice that providers document such in the medical record at the time of service. It is also recommended that an interpreter be offered for every encounter regardless of whether the member has refused the service in the past and that each offer be documented in the member's chart.
